Nostredame on Work Ethic

Public Education 7

Nancy of Oregon: On the new university education, it is being asked whether university students who had borrowed in excess of $100,000 would not sue the government to have this loan nullified.

ANDREA SELESTOW: This is not the same education however. It is as the Sage of Omaha said, "I would hire a Catholic meaning universal religion over a strictly business educated one."

Marquis Fontanes: This is the universal religion schooled one, and the university would be seen that there is no fornication.

At the time the University monopoly was created—were forced into celibate living in a kind of monastic community.

Typist: The students do not bring their lunch. They have a cafeteria that has the various franchise vendors, so lunch is $7 and their crafted coffees are $5. They choose this, how can this debt be absolved?

Bill Gates: This is a debt that cannot be totally adjudicated as their education is not the same. There are rules to enter the new university. You are not to learn to not be subversive to the State. You are to learn values, virtues, ethics, to come out with the university's mission, "to make better people" which is their mission. There are no foreign cultures allowed in to influence this seminary environment.

COMMENTARY: And in math and science scores, you are dreaming if you think you are to find the computer engineers based on math scores, as what it takes is a Level 5 and higher to find the sciences at work.

Bill Gates: The MBA was found useless to me I would have you know, as you do not create new products in this way by answering questions from textbooks as problem-solving. Rather, you need to be as what Beloved Astrea said, that they need to work a long time as DMV supervisors, with a line of people waiting to talk to them, to fix their computers and not give it to someone in some faraway office for them to do this.

COMMENTARY: That generation of Microsoft employees is also retiring, right Bill?

Bill Gates: They are! Thus you do not yet understand that these were the original geeks who worked in Silicon Valley who tinkered with computers in their homes and would add products from Radio Shack to make it do various programs that was not designed in the Microsoft product. These became the ones to be the DMV supervisors. Or went to work for other companies to add in a program that worked with the Microsoft computer.

Sage of Omaha: The education is not the same. It is a business decision that was in some ways fraudulent.

Nancy of Oregon: To sell the college loans, major banks held meetings for students. They came in with suits and experts talking about how their education was translated in dollars.

Sage of Omaha: This is not why a person goes to work for a Fortune 500 company. It is to find what is their talent and to hone that talent, and they will work at whatever level will be that would further them. Thus to hear that at Ohio University that a student graduates with a degree in logistic management when about the only company there is Milwaukee beer, and you see, this is a lie as who would hire anyone coming out of Ohio or New York University for that matter to be a logistics manager, it is not possible. Thus this formulation of college as being resulting in jobs galore is as if they were selling a gold mine with only gold at the exterior of the mine, with no more gold further inside.

It is furthermore delusionary that someone have a jobs faire at the end as what constitutes having a job in the Fortune 1000 companies.

Typist: What these financial experts who come to speak to the business classes say at the question about jobs in their city is: "I worked for a $500,000 market capitalization company and then in a few short years, I moved to a $700,000 market capitalization company."

Nancy of Oregon: Back when I went to the university, this is the position of salesman.

ANDREA SELESTOW: And wouldn't you learn how to overcome the difficulties in being in a salesman job? If he is a salesman, why does he not say this? What they say in the universities is to say that with a degree, you will be guaranteed a hire for being from a top university, coming out with the pay of $80,000.

Sage of Omaha: This is not my experience! They could have asked me!

Bill Gates: You have to prove your mettle.

COMMENTARY: An engineer working for Microsoft may surprise you. He is one who prizes his creations and experiments. He may even have the family microwave in parts, thinking that eventually he will finish his cherished project or creation. It is no longer a microwave oven. It is his art piece.

Typist: He may have 50 more projects in the garage, his Bill Gates garage. Then see how the vice-president of a major New York bank had in his garage perhaps 100,000 screws, 10,000 of this and that. It is an overflowing garage.

Nancy of Oregon: The mind is expansive. The development of the Threefold Flame has expanded. The Threefold Flame is spinning.

COMMENTARY: But he knows where everything is by year. The 1990 project and so on.

Bill Gates: Did I have these projects? It is the science museum in Seattle! Remember this! That what is there are the various projects you need to learn! It is not only having the MIT math and science scores.

COMMENTARY: The science projects are presented as art pieces. So you see that it was what you might not know that the engineer's life does not end with a business product. It is about art, sacred architecture, divine motion, space, life's meaning, it is about teaching. Bill Gates himself took to becoming the great teacher both as Bill Gates and Czar Peter the Great.

NOSTREDAME: The research departments of the United States will be seminaries. You can see in the example of France on what has been learned, that the engineers best doing the engineering are those at the higher Levels in the Seven Stages of Consciousness.

ANDREA SELESTOW: Catholic or Protestant or Quaker or Amish or Pilgrim seminaries! You see, without the seminaries full of those who are at the level of balancing of backdirect at the higher levels in community, your science is toward force and world tyranny, world banks, world hegemony.

NOSTREDAME: Toward world fascism, business fascism. You cannot prove this law otherwise.

Bill Gates: I did not have a choice to choose from Catholics the universal religion and MBAs. I am Peter, Czar Peter for the cultivation of Russia. Why would I not choose Catholics? Hands down. I would choose the Catholic.

Sage of Omaha: So you see this is a vastly different education, and those in the new universities would actually choose the universal religion (Catholic or Protestant).

Nevertheless to answer your question about the student loans. What would happen here is that these need to absorb the loss of the business decision they had made. If there is grant money, perhaps that would be a source of relief, however it is something they would challenge in court against the banks not the government where there was fraud.

MOTHER MARY: We are not complete with the requirements on the University. However you can readily see that the catholic student is not the same either as the Catholic school students either as this university of France so described of the new university is not the same.

MOSES: There are more rules and we will go into those later. And a simply analogy is that the student at these catholic seminaries would serve as public servants nevertheless in whatever business they would go into.

MOTHER MARY: They are aware of the Atom. They protect the Atom and protect life in the Atom. It is not a democracy. It is not the endless diatribe toward freedom of choice that they learn, but to protect the Atom. It is one of a self-identification in holy order.

NOSTREDAME: They have an understanding of the word "good".
