The Ministry of Police had charge of censoring the press. There was a regular routine for daily censorship of newspapers, with a Press Bureau in the Ministry charged with their supervision, primarily with the political part of the paper.

Certain topics remained completely taboo; others were merely on the forbidden list for a period of time or had to be discussed in the Moniteur newspaper before being taken up elsewhere. Among the forbidden topics were criticism of religion, the laws or morals, and anything reminiscent of political divisiveness and factioning.

The rigid censorship was part of what today would be called a police state.

Publication was forbidden if the book was held to be contrary to the interests of peace, the state, public order, or the Christian religion; the Director-General could order changes in the manuscript to make it acceptable for publication. Even though a book had been approved by the censorship, it might later be seized if the government considered it dangerous. Authors of unfriendly books were subject to arbitrary arrest.

Napoleon's instructions, were sometimes confusing, as in his message to viceroy in the Kingdom of Italy; "I want you to suppress completely the censorship of books. This country already has a narrow enough mind without straightening it any more. Of course the publication of any work contrary to the government would be stopped.”

Nancy of Oregon: In the defense of the nation, the United States, much of this rigorous censorship has largely been lost from the “anything goes” thinking of the Beatles. Who were fallen angels from Atlantis— John Lennon saying he would overtake the pope in attention of the people.

MOTHER MARY: Here “a police state” is not how you ought to describe this rightful censorship. Rather, the Ministry of Police would subject the writings to whether they would destroy the fabric of morals in a country. And this is actually the raison d’être of the University, in learning to be the defense of the United States.

Jesus Christ Speaking on a Religious Text of the Catholic Church from 2006.

JESUS CHRIST: You see that against the backdrop of the loss of students in the Catholic Schools that this one who would say that it was for secularism when in the free press, the reasons were cited as the Church’s ongoing policy on contraception, on the Church’s pedophile polities, the policies to not shepherd the prejudice towards women as the nuns, schools not being affordable. And in this book, he says the opposite, that they are making the schools available for the ghetto children. So he also says that the reason why Catholic School enrollment is down is “secularism” which is also a lie. This is the thinking of a demagogue.

JESUS CHRIST: Here you see the teachings I had given earlier this year, and you are asked again to come up higher.

MOTHER MARY: This non-accountability, to make demagoguery political-correct statements based on a fact of the Italians in ghettos a long time ago is apparent demagoguery and that you not be found in this thinking.

NATHAN the Judge: Do not turn a blind eye and a deaf ear to Jesus Christ to have the United States Catholic Church's to have this a Church of Christ.

JESUS CHRIST: We have need for you to go higher here. I am Jesus Christ, speaking to the priests one and all of Church Universal.

JESUS CHRIST: This control of the literature is the accountability of those at the University who seeks not to ferret out false teachings.

MOSES: Although it is the Ministry of Police who must recognize insurrection and irreverent thought.

Napoleon: You have to see what is the spirit of the nation. And if it is one that is fascism, you know that they will legislate morals to you.

Marquis Fontanes: It is the hope that you would not only say, "I learned to think at the university" but that you do go forth in the defense of the United States see where the demagoguery, the prejudice exists, and that you do recognize what are anti-freedom forces of which must be through the common-law courts be meeting out justice to all.

MOTHER MARY: It is incumbent that you see the tenet of witchcraft where it appears:

Tenet of Witchcraft: I make no mistakes. If I am found in a mistake, I will argue and act arrogant. I will kill the person.

NOSTREDAME: In the defense of the United States, we are asking you to see what are false teachings in a document, in an "ism". You are not able to for example, to ferret out the diabolical teachings of Karl Marx as you do not understand that he did not work. He expected the state to care for his family. He was evicted by the landlord for not paying the rent, he did not work. And here we have explained to you that the United States is a work ethic nation following after the Protestant Christian work-ethic. And here, Karl Marx, the non-working communist, adding insult to injury goes to live not in a communist nation in his older years but London.
