

The Reprimand of Michael Jackson 3

With Michael Jackson's
Teachers

The teachers asked of Michael Jackson,
"Is he then a prostitute?!" No.

B. B. King: What you see is the slavery background. You see that whether it was Louis Armstrong in "It's a Wonderful World" or Stevie "Wonder", that they were purposed to bring a cheerful and not a depressing sounding music.

Louis Armstrong: We were dirt poor. I certainly did not believe my father, not one bit. But he said to me to prove that it's a wonderful world. And this was then what became my raison d'être.

B. B. King: You see that even Amos & Andy had a sadness to the TV show. So in this gospel music, you see, this was the goal of every gospel singer, to lift the spirits of those around them. It was a tall order!

Michael Jackson: To see the history of modern gospel music, we played musical piece after musical piece. And it was not the same gospel music, so they asked how is it that you can "pretend" to have taught gospel music, it is not the same.

ANDREA of Chicago: The music that Michael Jackson made was for TV, MTV. Rock and roll. It was not soul music even when they play the R&B rhythm of today.

They asked, "Is he then a prostitute?!"

"Is Michael then an opportunist?"

Nancy of Oregon: You might ask, "Is he no different than the Renaissance painters that they were painting pornography as that is what the public wanted in Italy with painting the Rape of Lucretia by Renaissance painters?"

ANDREA of Chicago: In the time that I have known Michael Jackson, he is not a prostitute, neither is he an opportunist. Neither is he the pedophile that was portrayed in the courtroom of him by the power elite as he was a potential political voice to the powers that be. And he was acquitted of all charges. He was subsequently killed by them.

Nancy of Oregon: What Stevie Wonder said was, "His music is awful. Don't even listen to it. Terrible, really terrible. (laughing.) But he was a leader for the Negroid people. If it had not been for Michael Jackson, you would not see a Negroid in the White House. Forget his music" (laughter).

ANDREA of Chicago: And "You would not see the Negroids on TV if it had not been for Michael Jackson."

Nancy of Oregon: Stevie Wonder said, “You would not even see Magic Johnson in basketball. Terrible music, forget his music” (laughing).
